Senate Democratic bill

Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act

WHO'S COVERED

About 94 percent of legal residents under age 65—compared with 83 percent now. Government subsidies to help buy coverage start in 2014. Illegal immigrants would not receive assistance.

House bill

Affordable Health Care for America Act

About 96 percent of legal residents under age 65—compared with 83 percent now. Government subsidies to help buy coverage start in 2013. About one-third of the remaining 18 million people under age 65 left uninsured would be illegal immigrants.

COST

Coverage provisions cost

$848 billion over 10 years.

$1.055 trillion over 10 years.

HOW IT'S PAID FOR

Fees on insurance companies, drugmakers, medical device manufacturers. Medicare payroll tax increased to 1.95 percent on income over $200,000 a year for individuals; $250,000 for couples. New 5 percent tax on elective cosmetic surgery. Cuts to Medicare and Medicaid. Excise tax on insurance companies. Fines on people who fail to purchase coverage.

$460 billion over the next decade from new income taxes on single people making more than $500,000 a year and couples making more than $1 million.

REQUIREMENTS FOR INDIVIDUALS

Almost everyone must get coverage through an employer, on their own or through a government plan. Exemptions for economic hardship. Individuals must have insurance, enforced through a tax penalty of 2.5 percent of income. People can apply for hardship waivers if coverage is unaffordable.

REQUIREMENTS FOR EMPLOYERS

Not required to offer coverage, but medium and large companies would pay a fee if the government ends up subsidizing employees' coverage.

Employers must provide insurance to their employees or pay a penalty of 8 percent of payroll. Companies with payrolls less than $500,000 annually are exempt.

HOW YOU CHOOSE YOUR HEALTH INSURANCE

Self-employed people, uninsured individuals and small businesses could pick a plan offered through new state-based purchasing pools. Employees generally would be encouraged to keep their work-provided coverage.

Beginning in 2013 through a new Health Insurance Exchange open to individuals and, initially, small employers.

WHAT IT MEANS FOR PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Woman loses health benefits because of Facebook photos

Associated Press

A Canadian woman on long-term sick leave for depression says she lost her benefits because her insurance agent found photos of her on Facebook in which she appeared to be having fun.

Nathalie Blanchard has been on leave from her job at IBM for the past year.

The CBC reported Saturday she was diagnosed with major depression and was receiving monthly sick-leave benefits from insurance giant Manulife.

But the payments dried up this fall and when Blanchard called Manulife, she says she was told evidence on Facebook proved she could work.

She said her insurance agent described several pictures Blanchard posted on Facebook, including ones showing her having a good time at a Chippendales bar show, at her birthday party and on a sun holiday.

Blanchard said Manulife told her it's evident she is no longer depressed. She's fighting to get her benefits reinstated and says her lawyer is exploring what the next step should be.

Blanchard told the CBC that on her doctor's advice, she tried to have fun, including nights out at her local bar with friends and short getaways to sun destinations, as a way to forget her problems.

Manulife wouldn't comment on Blanchard's case but did say it would not deny or terminate a claim solely based on information published on Web sites such as Facebook.

Won't you be my roommate?

For the second time in two years, my three roommates and I set out in search of a new roommate through the venerable Craigslist.

I'm not entirely sure about this "Craig" character, but he does seem to have a never-ending supply of post-undergraduate twentysomething dudes moving to Chicago on a whim.

The problem with picking out random twentysomething guys to be your new roommate is that once you start interviewing them, you figure out they are all more or less the exact same person. Honestly, I can't figure out how women decide which one of us to date. As far as I can tell, we all have roughly the same lack of distinct good looks, sense of humor about all things sophomoric and favorite movies.

We're just one amorphous blob of ruddy flesh that likes genitalia jokes and the movie "The Usual Suspects."

As my roommates and I conducted the interviews, we decided two things: One, all these guys could be interchangeable gears in our house of never-ending uselessness and general excess. And two, all guys like watching TV on a big HD screen.

The latter realization had nothing to do with our search, but we found that when the interview was lagging we could always talk for a while about how awesome "Mad Men" looks in hi-def.

The problem with every guy being the same was that it led us to start judging people on minutiae that would make George Costanza wince.

"No way," said my roommate Erik. "That guy said he likes going to clubs. I don't want to live with some methamphetamine addict."

"Uh-uh," said my roommate Elliott. "That guy liked a song by the Gin Blossoms. I'd rather live with the meth-head."

"Forget it," said my roommate Liam. "That guy was a narcissistic creep with bizarre psychosexual issues. I also think he ate some of my toothpaste when he went to the bathroom."

In the end, after interviewing dozens of guys and asking an endless number of soul-delving questions, we ended up going with this dude from St. Louis we never even bothered to meet.

You see, he had a bad-ass flat-screen HDTV.

And believe me, this TV is bad-ass. This TV is so awesome that if this guy turned out to be a serial killer and murdered two of my roommates in their sleep, I would help him dispose of the bodies just so he wouldn't take the TV with him to jail.

Then when we got back, the new roommate and I could sit down and watch "The Usual Suspects" on our sweet TV. 'Cause that movie is awesome. Stephen Markley is a redeye special contributor.

Still deciding whether to drive, fly or stay at home this Thanksgiving? Surprisingly, that may not be a bad thing.

At the end of the summer, some experts cautioned that putting off Thanksgiving travel plans until the last minute would be costly. The warning was directed particularly at fliers hoping to snare low-priced tickets because the airlines have reduced flights and increased charges for items such as checked baggage in an effort to prop up airfares.

Well, things haven't necessarily turned out that way. Procrastinators are prevailing.

The major airlines are offering lastminute Thanksgiving sales, a reflection of a projected decline of almost 7 percent nationally in Thanksgiving air travel compared to last year.

The lowest average published airfares over the holiday weekend are down 4 percent, according to the AAA Leisure Travel Index.

Car rental rates have fallen too, down about 3 percent, and lodging rates are off last year's prices by 10 percent or more, the AAA found.

But be warned if you are hitting the road—drivers will be paying about 50 cents more per gallon for gasoline this Thanksgiving, and holiday driving will be about 2 percent above last year's level, the automobile club said.

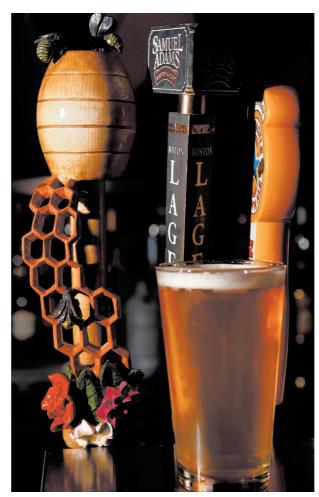

Then there are trains. Amtrak has scheduled extra trains and longer trains to accommodate more passengers.

"We are essentially doubling the size of many trains" on routes serving Chicago, Amtrak spokesman Marc Magliari said. In addition, Metra will operate extra "early getaway" trains Wednesday. For people staying home, a special $5 unlimited-ride Metra holiday fare is being offered Thursday and Friday, the biggest shopping day of the year, as well as over the weekend. Metra family fares are available for all four days, permitting up to three children to ride for free with a fare-paying adult.

The CTA also will provide extra service on bus and rail routes.

There is a growing pattern of more people taking off from work for the entire Thanksgiving week, travel experts say. That is serving as a relief valve, easing the crunch that historically peaked the Wednesday before Thanksgiving and the Sunday after the holiday.

GO Buzzworthy hotel news

The Marriott on Michigan Avenue has three beehives (right) that have produced about 260 pounds of honey it has used in its restaurant for dressings and in beer (above), wine and COffee. WILLIAM DESHAZER/CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Chicago Tribune

High-end hotel chains don't usually brag about having lots of insects on site, but the marketing folks working for one of the city's Marriotts are doing just that.

Officials with the Chicago Marriott Downtown Magnificent Mile are trying to create buzz about its rooftop bees, credited with producing 260 pounds of honey since they arrived in March. The bounty from the Italian five-striped honeybees has made its way into an in-house draft wheat beer and also into many of the restaurant's dishes.

Executive Chef Myk Banas said the hotel has invested about $2,500, including the cost of the bees, three insulated hives, bee protective gear and honey extracting equipment.

"We always look to do crazy ideas here," said executive sous chef Joe Plucinski, who was stung soon after he opened one of the hives for an observer without wearing protective gear.

A worker bee produces less than a teaspoon of honey over her lifetime. The hotel sells a 2-ounce bottle of the sweet stuff for $5.

Who's on Obama list?

Chicago Tribune

What's the hottest ticket in the nation's capital? An engraved invitation to Tuesday's White House State Dinner, the first hosted by President Obama.

He and the first lady will honor India's prime minister—in a big way, and in their way. In a departure from the most traditional venue, the elegant, high-ceilinged State Dining Room, the Obamas instead will gather with a few hundred VIPs in a huge, heated tent on the South

The guest list for the black-tie gala remains a closely guarded secret, so there's heavy speculation about who may turn up. Expect Vice President Joe Biden and his wife, Jill. Several Chicago notables are good bets, such as talk show diva Oprah Winfrey, hotel billionaire Penny Pritzker, businessman Marty Nesbitt and physician Eric

Look, too, for top Obama aides from Chicago, such as David Axelrod, Valerie Jarrett and Rahm Emanuel.

DEEP-SIXED

Bears fall to 4-6 in home loss to Donovan McNabb and the Eagles

Chicago Tribune

In recent games, Jay Cutler and the Bears defense have been taking turns tripping over their shoelaces.

So the expectation was that either Cutler would be on his game and the defense would be giving up acres at a time, or the defense would be solid and Cutler would have more completions to Eagles than Bears.

This time, it was a little of both in a 24-20 loss.

Cutler, as he often has after dark, misfired frequently. And the defense allowed too many big plays to win.

Cutler's interception with 45 seconds remaining sealed the verdict.

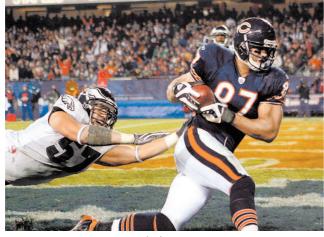

The defense performed poorly early, allowing the Eagles (6-4) to convert a third-and-1 with a 35-yard run by Michael Vick. The play set up a David Akers field goal that gave Philly a 3-0 lead Twenty penalty yards by the defense helped set up their next score, this one a 13-yard screen pass from Donovan McNabb to Jason Avant. The Eagles somehow got four offensive linemen out in front of Avant on the play.

Cutler didn't help the cause much early either. At the start of the second quarter, he missed Greg Olsen and Devin Hester on consecutive deep balls from the Eagles' 27. Both were open in the end zone, and Cutler overthrew both players.

The Bears (4-6) did salvage three points out of the drive thanks to a 45-yard Robbie Gould field goal.

The play of the first half for the Bears' offense, though, was a 72-yard run by Kahlil Bell. The running back was taking his first NFL handoff. He got a little lucky, as the Bears caught the Eagles in an all-out blitz. But Bell,

Bears tight end Kellen Davis (87) scores on a pass reception past Eagles linebacker Chris Gocong (57) in the third quarter. AP who was brought up from the practice squad Friday, knew what to do with the daylight.

He brought it all the way to the Eagles' 10, but the Bears still couldn't get a touchdown out of the deal. They had a 1-yard completion, a Matt Forte run for minus-1 yard and an incompletion before they settled for a 28-yard Gould field goal.

Cutler was lucky his incompletion wasn't an interception. It was yet another red-zone force, this one into double coverage to Olsen over the middle. Eagles corner Macho Harris got his hands on the ball.

The next time in the red zone, Cutler was smarter. He backpedaled away from pressure and threw the ball to a spot in the back of the end zone where no one could have caught it.

Gould's third field goal, a 28-yarder, pulled the Bears to within 10-9 with 13 seconds left in the first half.

The points were set up by a takeaway by Charles Tillman. He stripped DeSean Jackson of the ball, and Anthony Adams recovered on the Bears' 33. It was the Bears' second takeaway of the game, as Zack Bowman also came up with an interception on the previous Philadelphia possession.

Tillman came up with another forced fumble in the fourth quarter, poking the ball out of the arms of LeSean McCoy. Al Afalava recovered, setting up a 48-yard Gould field-goal attempt that was blocked.

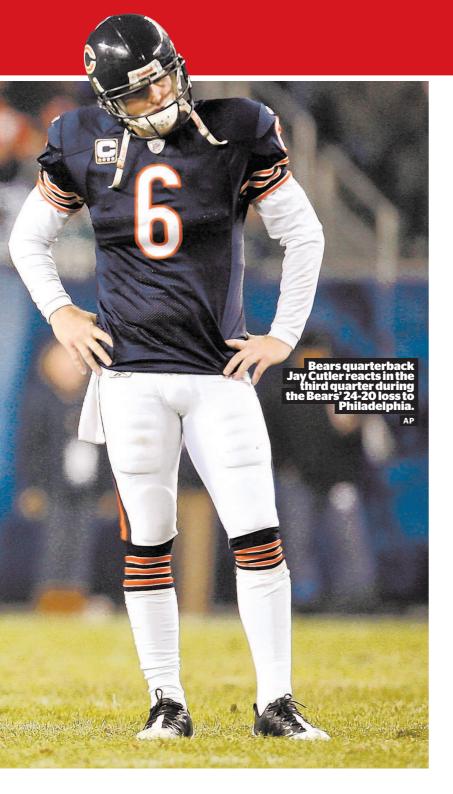

After falling behind 10-0, the Bears scored a dozen straight, with the final three coming on Gould's 49-yard field goal with 10:26 remaining in the third quarter.

Then the Eagles struck with a big play. McNabb hit Jackson on a 48-yard touchdown pass down the middle of the seam in the Cover-2 defense. The play began with play action, which appeared to cause free safety Danieal Manning to pause. Then Jackson ran by strong safety Afalava for the catch near the goal line.

MONDAY MOURNING | BY BAG BOY

In a rush for change

I've seen enough—and I'm not talking about the Bears in general. Although I'm getting close.

Matt Forte, time to take a seat. I have blamed the rushing game's problems on an ineffective offensive line. Kahlil Bell showed me in two carries that it's not just the O-line. It's also Forte.

Bell ripped off a 72-yard run on his first carry. And there wasn't a huge, gaping hole for him to get through. He had to do a little something-something to find the room to run.

On his next carry, he knocked off seven yards. Nothing spectacular, but better than Forte's sub-three-yards-per-carry average.

I don't want to pile on—Forte's seen enough of that from opposing defenses—but the Bears need to run the ball to set up the passing game. Forte just isn't cutting it.

Speaking of not cutting it: Cutler needs to find a happy medium.

One week he's throwing balls to the defense; then, he's throwing the ball to no one. How many wide-open receivers did he miss Sunday?

I don't know what's more surprising: That Cutler missed them or that they got open in the first place.

Jimmie Johnson wins fourthstraight NASCAR championship

All Jimmie Johnson ever wanted was a chance to race with the best in NASCAR. Maybe even win a race or two.

Never did he expect to be a champion.

Especially four times over.

Johnson bulldozed his way into the record books by becoming the first driver in NASCAR history to win four consecutive championships, finishing fifth in Sunday's season-finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway. He joins Richard Petty (7), Dale Earnhardt (7) and teammate Jeff Gordon (4) as the only drivers to win more than three titles.

"To do something that's never been done in the sport, and love the sport like I do and respect it like I do and the greats— Petty, Earnhardt, Gordon—to do something they have never done is so awesome," Johnson said. "And to win four championships in eight years, what this team has done—this is unbelievable."

Yes, it is.

Johnson now stands atop NASCAR as a one-man dynasty, much like Tiger Woods, Roger Federer and Lance Armstrong in their sports.

Only Johnson hasn't been feted under a blizzard of confetti by himself. His mighty Hendrick Motorsports team rules NASCAR the way UCLA once dominated the hardwood or Michael Jordan's Bulls reigned supreme.

There are seemingly plenty of chances left for Johnson's tag-team with crew chief Chad Knaus to keep the No. 48 in the title hunt for another decade.

The 34-year-old Californian on Friday signed a five-year contract extension to drive for Hendrick through 2015, and Knaus has insisted the No. 48 team can keep this pace for the next several years.

"He's not done yet," teammate Mark Martin said.

Four-peats Jimmie Johnson's four straight titles is a rare sports achievement-not even Michael Jordan and the Bulls could reach it. Here are some of the four-peats-or more-in the major pro and college sports.

What to do with your Thanksgiving visitors after the big turkey feast

By Julia Borcherts

When out-of-town relatives invade—oops, we mean enter—your home for Thanksgiving, they expect the usual bag of tricks: turkey, booze, pie and a few strained conversations after too much wine. But once the bird is gone and the dishes are dry, gift your guests with these alternatives to traditional holiday events. (If you can't throw all your traditions out the window, go to metromix. com for details on all the if-you-must classics we mention below.)

Bucktown Bazaar Holstein Park Fieldhouse, 22

Holstein Park Fieldhouse, 2200 N. Oakley Ave. 773-263-5882

Avoid downtown crowds at Christkindlmarket Chicago and make a group shopping pilgrimage to this DIY fair touting jewelry, mosaics, paper goods and more from 60 crafters and professional artists, including many from the annual Bucktown Arts Fest. Go: 11 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday-Sunday

Ice Skating at Midway Plaisance

1130 Midway Plaisance North. 312-745-2470

Need to break the ice with your sister's new beau? There are plenty of options outside of Millennium Park, including this Olympic-size outdoor rink overlooking the University of Chicago. After a few rounds, give your ankles a rest at BYOB cafe Medici on 57th (1327 E. 57th St. 773-667-7394), and dig into dishes such as a half-pound burger on a potatobread bun ($7.99).

Go: 1-9 p.m. Saturday; noon-7 p.m. Sunday. Free; $5 skate rental

'It Came Upon a Midnight Queen'

Chemically Imbalanced Theater, 1420 W. Irving Park Rd. 800-838-3006

Everyone knows the story of Scrooge in "A Christmas Carol." But do your guests know the story of a nerdy girl-turned-YouTube sensation? This new holiday comedy of accidents features the music of rock band Queen and a dramatic plea to Nick Nolte. Go: 8 p.m. Friday-Saturday. $15

Cocktails with a view

Vertigo, 2 W. Erie St. 312-202-6060

Share the love—for each other and for killer cityscape views—at this 26th floor indoor-outdoor alternative to Signature Lounge, featuring a heated rooftop and handcrafted winter warmers made tableside from a drink cart, such as the Firecracker Peppermint Patty (hot chocolate, peppermint schnapps and cayenne pepper, $15). Go: 5 p.m.-2 a.m. daily (terrace closes at 11 p.m.)

Ben Lerman

Mary's Attic, 5400 N. Clark St. 773-784-6969

Lively music is a holiday weekend must, but what package it comes in is up to you. Skip Aussie singers The Ten Tenors for the release of "Size Matters," the new EP from a New York-based, gay ukuleleplaying comedian who gets big laughs with his tiny instrument and bawdy songs about bondage, crystal meth, chubby chasers and more.

Go: 7:30 p.m. Saturday. $8-$12

'Carnival Nocturne'

Chicago DCA Storefront Theater, 66. E. Randolph St. 312-742-8497

Bypass Cirque du Soleil prices with this dark fable from Silent Theatre Company—complete with live music and circus arts—about the secret lives of carnival performers. The company leads a free workshop on circus shtick from 2-5 p.m. Saturday. Go: 7:30 p.m. Friday-Saturday; 3 p.m. Sunday. $20; $10 for students

'Camino a Casa' exhibit and Mercado Navideno

National Museum of Mexican Art, 1852 W. 19th

If your annual trek to the Museum of Science and Industry's "Christmas Around the World" exhibit is wearing thin, feast your eyes on more than 20 handcrafted ofrendas (altars) at this Day of the Dead exhibit. Don't miss the Mexican folk art holiday marketplace featuring pottery, paintings and more.

Go: 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily

Live band karaoke

Piece, 1927 W. North Ave. 773-772-4422

Trade classic carols at Cloud Gate for classic rock—or pop, punk or soul—with backing by The Karaoke Dokies. If belting makes you hungry like a wolf, grab a New Haven-style pizza ($10.95 and up) and wash it down with award-winning homebrews, such as a Dark-n-Curvy Dunkelweizen wheat ale ($7).

Go: 11 p.m.-3 a.m. Saturday. No cover

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

Eligible participants must: • Be 18 years or older

- Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
- Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

The job: Creative genius behind the fashion lines that are showcased on the runway.

At the show: Christina Fan applied to the Gen Art fashion show on a whim. When she found out she made the cut, the 25-year-old, who deferred law school to pursue fashion, worked frantically for the next three weeks, sewing her remaining pieces by hand. At Gen Art, Fan debuted 10 looks in her menswear-inspired Park Wicker collection-mainly dresses in slate, chalk and black with the occasional burst of amethyst, coral and jadeite. As the clock neared 8 p.m., Fan dressed the models with the help of assistants and volunteer design students. She gave them a last once-over before giving them the final nod of approval to walk out on the runway. The best moment for her, Fan said, was "when I walked out at the very end ... and at one point it finally clicked that people were applauding for me."

The worst thing that can go wrong

is... "if someone were to trip and fall or if something happens to one of your looks backstage,"

Fan said.

Lights, camera, fashion

Chicago amid a surge in chic

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Call it organized chaos.

Designers run around, grabbing last minute accessories. Steps away, clothes fly as models disrobe and get dressed, trying not to bump into each other. Hairspray fills the air. Makeup artists stand at the ready for emergency touch-ups. Lenny Kravitz's "Are You Gonna Go My Way" thumps in the background. Welcome backstage under the white tent at Chicago's Millennium Park—the site of one of the city's biggest fashion shows.

On this particular Saturday night last month, Gen Art's seventh annual "Fresh Faces in Fashion" in Chicago, was rocking the runway with an audience of about 900, according to organizers. The show, also held in New York and Los Angeles, is known for launching the careers of designers such as Zac Posen and Chicago's Lara Miller.

In recent years, Chicago's fashion scene has been thrust into the spotlight thanks to a certain fashionista in the White House and her support of local designers, notably Maria Pinto. The city boasts more than 400 designers and 375 independent boutiques, according to Karen Vaughan, spokeswoman for the Chicago Office of Tourism. It is home to four fashion design colleges, including the School of the Art Institute, which counts designer Cynthia Rowley as an alumna.

At the center of it all is the runway show—Chicago hosts more than 100 shows, big and small, every year, Vaughan said. The Gen Art event last month wrapped up Fashion Focus Chicago, a four-day celebration of local fashion. More recently, local designers were featured in runway shows at the Chifa Elite Fashion Explosion this weekend in Chicago.

So what does it take to pull off a runway show? Event directors, models, hair stylists and, of course, designer—meet some of the key players who made it work at the "Fresh Faces in Fashion" show. LVIVANCO@TRIBUNE.COM

||||| The event director |||||||||

The job: Produces the show, troubleshoots problems on the runway and backstage and has the ability to function on very little sleep.

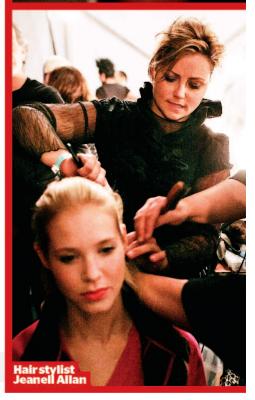

At the show: Event director Lauren Hurley, 27, and event manager Marcia Callaghan, 23, who work for Gen Art's Chicago office, had been in heavy planning mode since August for the Gen Art "Fresh Faces."

No detail was left unchecked on their to-do list, from big-picture (they found sponsors, ordered all the props, cast models and created a seating chart for 900 people) to little details (they arranged the order of models to walk the runway and posted Polaroids of the models and their outfits to remind designers of every item they need for their complete look).

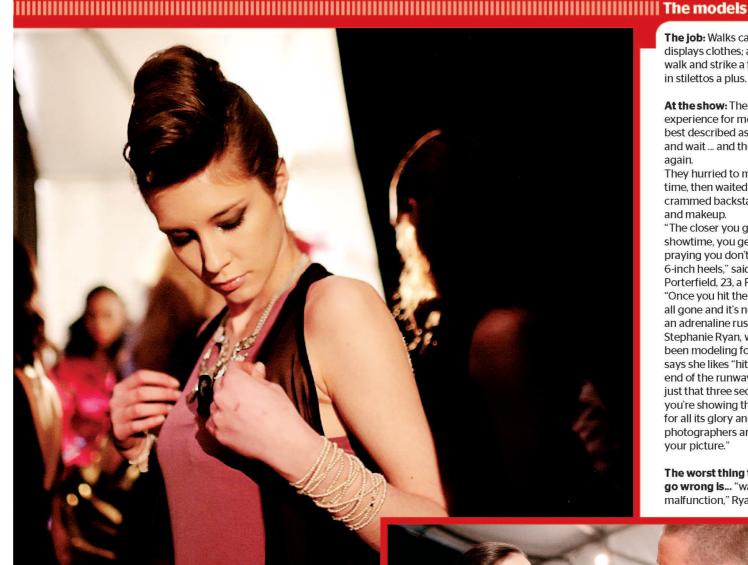

The day of the show, the sleep-deprived pair showed up for a 20-hour day in scrubs. During a free moment before the show started, Callaghan ditched the scrubs for a black mini and Hurley transformed with a flirty strapless purple dress. A stop by hair and makeup, and they were ready for prime time. As the models lined up before the show, Hurley took a moment to scribble notes for her speech. "We're amped. ... It's game time," Callaghan said.

The worst thing that can go wrong is ... "any tech problem is a pretty big nightmare," Callaghan said.

25 NOVEMBER 23, 2009 ▮ REDEYE

The job: Walks catwalk and displays clothes; ability to walk and strike a fierce pose in stilettos a plus.

At the show: The runway experience for models is best described as hurry up and wait ... and then hurry again.

They hurried to make call time, then waited for hours crammed backstage for hair and makeup.

"The closer you get to showtime, you get nervous, praying you don't fall in 6-inch heels," said Shaletta Porterfield, 23, a Ford model. "Once you hit the stage, it's all gone and it's nothing but an adrenaline rush." Stephanie Ryan, who has been modeling for a year, says she likes "hitting the end of the runway. It's just that three seconds you're showing the look for all its glory and the photographers are taking your picture."

The worst thing that can go wrong is... "wardrobe malfunction," Ryan said.

THE BIG DAY

The day of the fashion show involves more than 12 hours of planning. Here's a look at the detailed Gen Art "Fresh Faces in Fashion" schedule provided by event director Lauren Hurley.

The lighting, staging, audio and video company arrives to hang signage and make modifications to the stage and seating areas.

Event director, manager and producers arrive at tent.

Event setup begins.

Tech rehearsal, designers arrive.

Models call time, rehearsal and report to hair and makeup.

Doors open.

Designers, models, and hair and makeup get a 15 minute warning to be ready for the show.

The show begins.

The job: Crafting perfectly styled coifs, beachy waves and sexy bedhead looks for models.

At the show: Stylists Marcia Ademoski, 31, and Gina Scalpone, 34, each packed her survival kit for the Gen Art fashion show: hair spray, blow dryers, diffusers, curling irons, flat irons, brushes, combs, bobby pins, rubber bands and hair extensions. Since big hair is in this year, Ademoski prays the models have good, thick hair so she can give it some volume. But just in case, she's armed with extensions.

Backstage they hunched over the models sitting in chairs much lower than in salons and so tightly packed together they're bumping elbows with other stylists. "They've got to be pretty patient sitting in tiny little chairs, waiting for our fuses to blow out any second," Ademoski said of models. Their challenge: Getting the models' hair done quickly so they can get out on the runway in time.

The worst thing that can go wrong is... "the hair falls off-an extension-or the bobby pins are not holding," Ademoski said.

The job: Creates the flawless, killer looks for models.

Makeup artist Adi Lando

At the show: Imagine a model strutting on the runway in perfectly tailored clothes and perfectly styled hair but no makeup. Adi Lando, a perfectionist, shudders at the idea.

"It's almost if you put a picture without a frame on the wall. It's not really complete," said Lando, 39, a Sephora Pro Beauty Team makeup artist. His bare necessities for the Gen Art show: 10 brushes, brush cleaner, foundation, pencils, eye shadows and creams and lipstick. And he works fast: He's trained to apply a runway look in 25 minutes. What's tricky is changing up the models' makeup if they have to walk for more than one designer.

"Sometimes, you have a minute or so to do something with the makeup. You really have to work fast," Lando said.

The worst thing that can go wrong is...

"if you did the look and all of the sudden the designer says it's not the look they were looking for and you have to change it and there's not enough time," Lando

HAPPY B-DAY! Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

It could be time for a different approach. If you've been casually dating a lot of guys. maybe it's time to be more selective. Or if you've been tied down to just one girl, you might feel the urge to broaden vour social circle. The sun says switch things around.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan.19
You might feel like you're outgrowing certain relationships, thanks to Pluto. Maybe you no longer feel like hanging out with the same buddies. Or perhaps you're tired of dating certain types of people over and over again. Make a change.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18 Three planets i

Three planets in your sign are making you bolder than ever. You'll have no shame as you chase after someone, openly broadcasting your lust. Just remember: If that person is married, you could be opening a big can of worms.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20 People around you are noticing you more these days. A coworker could be nursing a secret crush on you. A neighbor is checking you out. Or a friend of a friend is hoping to cross your path again and get to know you better.

Aries

March 21-April 19
You're tired of your bedroom routine. Your partner always wants the lights on, and you prefer to do your thing in the dark. Or your lover is spending too little time focusing on you and too much time obsessing about work. The sun says stir things up.

Taurus

April 20-May 20 With Venus opposite your sign, you're worried that you've been dating an extraterrestrial. Something seems "off" in your relationship. Maybe your boyfriend is developing secretive and mysterious habits or your girlfriend is acting weird. Investigate.

Gemini

May 21-June 21 This isn't your best time of year. The sun is opposite your sign, and you just want to curl up in your lair and sleep until springtime. Soak up some positive energy by chatting with a good friend. Or invite that on-again, off-again lover to your place for a rendezvous.

Cancer

June 22-July 22 A flirty moon is heightening your desire for fun. If you're single, you'll be tempted to start something with a sexy colleague. If you're with someone, you'll want your partner to focus exclusively on you. You want some action, and you want it now.

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22 Work, housing and cash flow are giving you headaches, thanks to Jupiter. With everything in a state of flux, you're not in the best frame of mind to concentrate on your partner. Don't neglect your honey too much, unless you want him or her to turn elsewhere for attention.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22 Don't second guess yourself. Deep down, you know the score about that certain someone you've recently met. Trust your instincts. A moon opposition is reminding you that your intuition is pretty powerful. It rarely steers you wrong.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23 As you head into the weekend, you and your honey could experience a missed connection. The moon is creating some temporary glitches. Even if you can't get together, you always can share some sexy pillow chat over the phone or exchange a few steamy text messages.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21 Venus in your sign is increasing your sex drive. At work, you're lost in lusty daydreams. At home, you can't wait until your partner comes home since you're constantly fantasizing about your next steamy encounter.

The show Awards for Jackson

30

Michael Jackson posthumously won four American Music Awards on Sunday night, but Taylor Swift was the year's favorite artist and the night's top winner. The teen sensation took home five trophies.

Glambert, Gaga

Adam Lambert gave the final performance of the evening, trying mightily to titillate by making out with the keyboardist and directing dancers' faces at his crotch area. Lady Gaga twitched her way through her performance, smashing glass bottles, slouching over a flaming piano and wearing a fleshcolored bodysuit and an Ace bandage.

World Peas

The Black Eyed Peas, voted favorite pop/ rock band, energized the audience by performing two of their most popular and overplayed hits.

Oops

Jennifer Lopez added a silly boxing motif to her dance-filled performance, but she slipped and landed on her butt.

Sell it

Janet Jackson performed a medley of some of her biggest hits—reminding everyone about her new greatest-hits collection, "Number Ones."

WEARING US DOWN

The American Music Awards gives musicians and other celebrities a chance to exhibit their personal styles on the red carpet, usually against the better judgment of their handlers. Sunday night did not disappoint. EMILY ROSENBAUM, REDEVE

Kelly Clarkson loves her curves and so do we, but this glittering dress has no shape and leaves her looking like a big lump.

Selena Gomez shows how to do sequins right in this fresh and flirty little frock with cool strappy sandals.

Nicole Kidman usually wows on the red carpet, but this time she's a miss in a dress with fishlike scales and awkward stripes. Keith Urban shows his fingers grow weary halfway through buttoning his shirt.

"Hey, here I am. I thought it would be cold here, wherever I am." Val Kilmer seems to be channeling Marlon Brando, the later years, in this bizarre ensemble. The lovely Leona Lewis turns up in a vampire dress made from stiff, shiny trash bags. NOVEMBER 23, 2009 I REDEYE

'Moon' landing in Chicago

Stars of "The Twilight Saga: New Moon" were in Chicago during the weekend to promote their new flick, which is receiving rave reviews from tween viewers.

Christian Serratos and Ashley Greene came to town separately to promote the screamer.

Serratos did an interview with my intern Sydney Park on Thursday evening at a screening at the AMC Loews 600 North Michigan 9.

When asked if she was a fan of the series before she was cast, Serratos said, "No. I had never heard of them and had no idea what they were even about." Serratos wouldn't comment on Robert Pattinson and Kristen Stewart's romance. "You can't say anything unless you're one of the parties involved," she said.

Saturday evening, Greene rode on a float in the parade during The Magnificent Mile Lights Festival. Greene spent half of the time allotted for reporters looking for a bathroom, so things were cut a bit short. But once she got to her float, she answered questions and was pleasant.

Still her kind of town

Calm down, Oprah fans. The queen of daytime's not going anywhere—well, at least she's not leaving Chicago.

Hoping to quell fears that Winfrey would head for the hills after her talk show ends in 2011, rep Don Halcombe told The Hollywood Reporter she won't be abandoning Chicago, citing the ongoing success of Harpo Inc., her production studio. "She loves Chicago and has been very proud to call Chicago her home these last 24 years," he said.

everyone sucks, he said. "Jay-Z put out an incredible album this year and Lil Wayne put out an incredible album last year."

Are we done here?

Jon and Kate Gosselin could finish out the year with their divorce proceedings completed.

Jon's attorney, Mark Heller, said that a weekend arbitration hearing between the "Jon & Kate Plus 8" stars was productive. Awkward alert: Jon showed up at the session with roses. His lawyer told people.com they were a peace offering, but Kate refused to take them. "There were a couple of very emotional moments," Heller said, but it all ended happily.
